

Master of Urban and Regional Planning

College of Environmental Design | California Polytechnic University, Pomona

Program Learning Outcomes

- Student-centered graduate and undergraduate programs in urban and regional planning that implement Cal Poly Pomona’s “learn by doing” educational philosophy and are centers of excellence for the University and the profession.
- A supportive environment for teaching and learning, research, community service, and University and Department governance. A sense of community among students, faculty and alumni
- A proactive stance toward community change at the local, regional, national, and international level, and a high level of responsiveness and service to communities.

Student Learning Outcomes

- Mastery of urban and regional planning knowledge
- Demonstrated professional level of communication and dialogic skills
- Demonstrated skills and creativity in research, analysis, and problem solving
- Expertized skills and creativity in design, plan making, and policy making
- Reflective capacity in ethical and normative reasoning and the application of the capacity to planning practices